What were the key factors that affected the fund's performance?

Avantis Emerging Markets Value ETF returned 17.09% for the reporting period ended August 31, 2025.

The fund seeks long-term capital appreciation. The commentary below refers to the fund's performance compared to the MSCI Emerging Markets IMI Value.

- Against a backdrop of slow global growth and solid corporate earnings results, emerging markets (EM) stocks rallied for the 12-month period and outperformed developed markets stocks. Within the EM universe, large-cap stocks outperformed small caps, and the growth style broadly outperformed value.
- The fund's overweight versus the index in companies with the highest combined profitability and book-to-market characteristics, which outperformed for the period, contributed to performance. An underweight to companies with the lowest profitability and book-to-market traits, which underperformed, also boosted results.
- Sector weightings, byproducts of the fund's focus on valuation metrics, contributed overall. An overweight to the outperforming consumer discretionary sector and an underweight to the underperforming energy sector were key contributors.
- The fund's underweight position in mega-cap stocks, which outperformed, and overweight in smaller-cap stocks, which underperformed, detracted from performance.
