What were the key factors that affected the fund's performance?

Avantis U.S. Large Cap Value ETF returned 11.90% for the reporting period ended August 31, 2025.

The fund seeks long-term capital appreciation. The commentary below refers to the fund's performance compared to the Russell 1000 Value Index.

- Against a backdrop of positive corporate earnings results, resilient economic growth and federal tax relief legislation, U.S. stocks broadly rallied for the 12-month period. Stocks advanced despite periodic volatility from tariff policy uncertainty, rising interest rates, geopolitical tensions and persistent inflation. Within the U.S. market, large-cap stocks outperformed small caps, and growth stocks broadly outperformed their value-style counterparts.
- The fund's overweight versus the index in companies with the highest combined profitability and book-to-market characteristics, which outperformed, contributed to performance. An underweight to companies with the lowest profitability and book-to-market traits, which underperformed, also lifted results.
- Sector weightings, a byproduct of the fund's focus on valuation metrics, contributed to performance overall. An underweight to the underperforming health care sector and an overweight to the outperforming communication services sector were key contributors.
- Excluding real estate investment trusts (REITs), which is a strategic rather than tactical allocation, also aided performance. REITs underperformed for the period.
