How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

- For the 12 months ended October 31, 2025, the Fund performed in line with its benchmark.
- Optimism in the U.S. about the prospect of tax cuts, robust corporate earnings, and artificial intelligence was, at times, tempered by market concerns about interest rates, stretched equity valuations, and U.S. trade policy announcements. Short-term interest rates generally fell during the 12-month period, with the Federal Reserve and the Bank of England each making four rate cuts and the European Central Bank making five.
- Technology, by far the largest sector by weight in the benchmark index, was the top contributor to the index's return, followed by financials.
- Nearly all regions posted robust gains. North America, which accounted for almost two-thirds of the benchmark index by weight, contributed most. For U.S.-based investors, the weakening of the U.S. dollar relative to major European currencies helped boost returns from European stocks.
