How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

- For the 12 months ended December 31, 2025, the Fund performed in line with its benchmark.
- The first part of the year was marked by volatility in the financial markets amid fears that U.S. tariff announcements might spark trade wars and drag down global growth. Despite these concerns, markets posted solid gains for the year, buoyed by optimism surrounding artificial intelligence, robust corporate earnings, and a more dovish monetary policy. The European Central Bank and the Bank of England each cut interest rates four times, while the Federal Reserve lowered rates three times.
- All of the benchmark's 11 industry sectors posted positive returns. Technology, which had the largest weighting and the highest return, contributed by far the most to performance. Financials and industrials were also among the top performers.
